English for Safety

Vocational English for refugees and migrants

Being able to communicate clearly about safety is not just important – it can save lives.

For refugees and migrants working in environments such as construction sites, factories, warehouses and manufacturing plants, having the right English skills to understand and respond to safety-critical situations is essential.

This course gives learners the vital English skills and confidence they need to understand safety instructions, report hazards, support their colleagues, and play a full part in creating a safe workplace.

Through a wide range of realistic exercises and scenarios, learners develop the language skills they need to communicate confidently and effectively in safety-critical workplace situations.
